The Mountains of Pomeroy

In this tragic tale, a maid meets her love, the “gallant Reynardine,” an outlaw, on the mountains of Pomeroy. Even though he is an outlaw, he “keeps the flag of freedom safe.” In this sense, the figure of Reynardine is more akin to “freedom fighter” outlaws such as Rob Roy or Robin Hood. She is afraid for him because her kinsmen would kill him, so she leaves “her cruel kin and home” to run away and marry him, but drowns on the way in a storm. The real-life Mountains of Pomeroy are a vast mountain range that runs west of the town of Pomeroy in County Tyrone, Northern Ireland. The area around the mountain range is scenic, with a variety of moorland, forestry and rural farming.
